The epistle starts off as a written sermon and closes in the form of an epistle. Neither author nor addressee is mentioned in it. The title "to the Hebrews" only appears in the 2nd century with Clemens of Alexandria (around 150 - 215 AC). As there is no other name known for the epistle it probably goes back to a very old tradition.

EXPOSITION OF THE EPISTLE OF JAMES - BELIEVER'S BOOKSHELF ...
The epistle puts the truth of this profession to the proof. Whatever may have been the connection of the believers with the people, the writer of our epistle supposes faith in those to whom it is addressed - a faith which perhaps might have been practically found in a Jew before he believed in Jesus - therefore, with the addition of this belief, a true faith which had been produced by the word of God in the heart.
