An estimated 4.6 million people in the United States care for someone with cancer at home. 2 Too often, these caregivers-spouses, other family members, or friends-are poorly prepared for this vital but demanding role that takes a toll on them and, by extension, the patient. 3,4 Only one third of all caregivers report being asked by a health care provider what they need to care for the ...

Supporting the Supporters: What Family Caregivers Need to ...
Introduction. Of the estimated 44 million informal caregivers in the United States, 3.5 million are thought to care for cancer survivors. 1 As cancer care shifts from the inpatient to the outpatient setting 2 and as individuals with cancer in both early and chronic stages live longer, the number of cancer caregivers will grow and their contributions will increase.
